Blizzard Safety

Follow the storm trackers on your local news.

Charge electronic devices.

Once you fully charge your electronic devices, try not to use them so that the batteries last throughout the blizzard.

Stay inside and off the roads.

In car: only run the engine for ~ ten minutes every hour to keep the car warm. Crack the window periodically and make sure the tailpipe is not blocked by snow to prevent carbon monoxide from accumulating in the car.

Prepare to go without power and heat.

Create an emergency supply kit. Include candles, matches, flashlights, batteries, warm clothes for everyone in your family and plenty of non-perishable food.

Hurricane Safety

Charge electronic devices.

Once you fully charge your electronic devices, try not to use them so that the batteries last throughout the hurricane.

Prepare to go without power and heat.

Creating an emergency supply kit is an excellent idea. Be sure to include candles, matches, flashlights, batteries, water, and plenty of non-perishable food.

Stay indoors and away from windows.

If you need to be out, don't walk or drive through flowing water.

Six inches of swiftly moving water can knock you off of your feet, and cars can be swept away in just two feet of moving water.

Ice Storm Safety

Keep your car off the road.

Freezing rain can make roads slippery in seconds. If you can, wait to drive until roads have been salted or sanded, and stick to major routes. Remember that it takes longer to stop on snow and ice, so stay well behind the car in front of you.

If you must go outside, be aware of ice sheets and ice-covered branches or wires, which could break and fall under the weight.

Let your power company or local police know about downed or hanging power lines.
